Special Help for Wounded Warriors

I offer my heartfelt thanks to Karl Rove ("Giving Back to Those Who Gave So Much," Dec. 23 op-ed) for highlighting the organizations that are doing such great work for our wounded heroes. My son is a former Marine who was seriously wounded in Iraq in 2006 while on his second tour there. I was at three military hospitals with him as he made his recovery and I can't begin to tell you what an inspiration it is to see the courage and determination of these young men and women.

I might also add the names of three more organizations that are doing amazing work helping service members and their families. They are the Semper Fi Fund, Wounded Warrior Project and Operation Second Chance. Americans should be very proud of our heroic patriots and the great organizations that are helping them.
